

Halil Demirdelen is an archaeologist and serves as Vice Director at the Museum of Anatolian Civilizations in Ankara. He has published many books and catalogues about excavations and museum education practices. He completed his Master's degree in education and museum education at Ankara University in 1998. He has given several lectures about cultural heritage, Anatolian civilizations and museum education activities in Turkey and abroad.