

Chris Roosevelt (Cornell University, PhD) has been the director of the Research Center for Anatolian Civilizations (RCAC) and an Associate Professor at Koç University since 2015. He specializes in the archaeology of western Anatolia (Turkey), specifically that of the Bronze and Iron Age civilizations emerging in the area best known as the ancient kingdom of Lydia. With Prof. Christina Luke, since 2005 Roosevelt has co-directed archaeological research projects investigating cultural and environmental dynamics in the Gediz Valley.